Mark Horton : Close Encounters: Bridge's Greatest Matches before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Close Encounters: Bridge's Greatest Matches:

Over 100 years of bridge history it is not surprising that one can find many matches and events that came down to the last board, or even the last card, played. And of course, there is an added poignancy in these situations that derives from the fact that bridge is a unique sport in one aspect the players do not know the score. In this book, the authors collect dozens of fascinating deals, each of which is that last board the one that decided a world title and represented an individual triumph or tragedy.

About the Author London-based Mark Horton is an internationally known bridge player and writer, and is editor of UK Bridge magazine. His most recent book was The Rabbi's Rules (Master Point Press, 2013; ISBN 9781771400015). Canadian Eric Kokish is a World Championship silver medalist as a player. He is the world's top professional bridge coach, having worked with the national teams of a number of countries. He is best-known as coach to Nick Nickell's multiple world titles from the USA.
