

[Read free ebook] Soviet Cinema in the Silent Era, 19181935 (Texas Film Studies Series)

Soviet Cinema in the Silent Era, 19181935 (Texas Film Studies Series)

Denise J. Youngblood

*DOC | audiobook | ebooks | Download PDF | ePub

Download

Read Online

#4222151 in Books 1991-05-01Original language:EnglishPDF # 1 9.00 x .75 x 6.00l, #File Name: 0292776454352 pages | File size: 47.Mb

Denise J. Youngblood : Soviet Cinema in the Silent Era, 19181935 (Texas Film Studies Series) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Soviet Cinema in the Silent Era, 19181935 (Texas Film Studies Series):

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Thorough readBy always learningA very good exploration of cinema in the Soviet Union. It takes the reader on a journey, from the Lenin years of the revolution, exploring 1924 as a pivotal year in Soviet cinema, through the 1920s and into the Purge years.

The golden age of Soviet cinema, in the years following the Russian Revolution, was a time of both achievement and contradiction, as reflected in the films of Eisenstein, Pudovkin, and Kuleshov. Tensions ran high between creative freedom and institutional constraint, radical and reactionary impulses, popular and intellectual cinema, and film as social propaganda and as personal artistic expression. In less than a decade, the creative ferment ended, subjugated by the ideological forces that accompanied the rise of Joseph Stalin and the imposition of the doctrine of Socialist Realism on all the arts. Soviet Cinema in the Silent Era, 1918-1935 records this lost golden age. Denise Youngblood considers the social, economic, and industrial factors that influenced the work of both lesser-known and celebrated directors. She reviews all major and many minor films of the period, as well as contemporary film criticism from Soviet film journals and trade magazines. Above all, she captures Soviet film in a role it never regained that of dynamic artform of the proletarian masses.

"Denise J. Youngblood's informative study . . . offers a striking assessment of film's role as the dynamic art form of the proletarian masses in the years following the 1917 Russian revolution. The book reviews the work of Eisenstein, Pudovkin, Kuleshov and other Soviet filmmakers in a comprehensive coverage of an intensely creative period." (American Cinematographer) "Denise Youngblood is a pioneer. On the basis of having seen every available Soviet silent film and read all existing film journals, [she] successfully describes the problems and debates that occupied Soviet film people in the golden age." (Canadian-American Slavic Studies) From the Publisher: This product is not a traditionally bound book. Many ProQuest UMI products are black-and-white reproductions of original publications produced through the Books On Demand program. Alternately, this product may be a photocopy of a dissertation or it may be a collection reproduced on microfiche or microfilm if it is intended for library purchase. About the Author: Denise J. Youngblood, a former executive director of the Association for the Advancement of Soviet Studies, is Professor of History at the University of Vermont.