Hejduk Darwin Awards are awarded posthumously to those who remove themselves from the gene pool in a way that makes you go a lot of beer must have gone into that one. The Darwin Awards Next Evolution describes the final acts of several people as well as things done by at risk survivors. The vignettes are humorous and clearly marked whether they are confirmed or unconfirmed. Interspersed between the chapters are essays on scientific topics ranging from mosquito spit to duck phalli to real life Hobbits. There's an extensive FAQ at the end (too extensive, honestly). It's a fun read and occasionally educational, too. It can all be found on the Darwin Awards website, but it's often more convenient to read in book form. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Always laugh-out-loud funny

By Nancy J. The Darwin Awards are given to people who die in the dumbest way. It may sound callous to say the stories are hilarious since the person ended up dead. However, they died because of the stupid situations they put themselves in. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Too much filler!
By Lynn A. Morris At least half of the book is filler stuff like science essays and FAQs. While the actual Darwin awards part was good, there wasn't enough of it for the price I paid. I feel I should get at least half of my money back, as I only got half of what I wanted to read. I get more material to read from a Reader's Digest magazine for about a quarter the price I paid for this.

The hilarious New York Times bestselling phenomenon more than 1.5 million copies sold! New York Times bestselling author Wendy Northcutt is back, asking, Have we evolved at all? The answer: Not all of us. What crazy cocktail of DNA leads Homo sapiens to do pull-ups off the edge of a seventh-floor balcony or wrap their lips around a paintball gun and pull the trigger? How about offering a beer to a bear or self-testing a Taser? Why not go joyriding in a shopping cart strapped to an SUV or jump a drawbridge on a bicycle? Fully illustrated with over a hundred new jaw-dropping and side-splitting feats of stupidity and including science essays by guest writers and answers to FAQs about evolution in action
The Darwin Awards Next Evolution continues the tradition of honoring the victims of appallingly poor survival instinct who selflessly improve our gene pool by removing themselves from it.

The Darwin Awards is a riot to read. Deeply entertaining.
San Francisco Weekly "Delightfully funny, The Darwin Awards, taken together, constitute a delicious sermon in support of common sense."
The Baltimore Sun About the Author A graduate of UC Berkeley with a degree in molecular biology, Wendy Northcutt began collecting the stories that make up the Darwin Awards in 1993. Her award-winning Web site www.DarwinAwards.com is one of the most popular humor pages on the Web. The Darwin Awards have been profiled in USA Today, The Wall Street Journal, Entertainment Weekly, and on NPR's All Things Considered. Wendy is the author of the international bestsellers The Darwin Awards: Evolution in Action, The Darwin Awards 2: Unnatural Selection, The Darwin Awards 3: Survival of the Fittest, The Darwin Awards 4: Intelligent Design, The Darwin Awards: Next Evolution, and The Darwin Awards: Countdown to Extinction.
